OFFICE: No. 15 Quincy Street. FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1872.

THE Charleston Courier congratulates itself that the "frozen rivers" will chill the capital moving enterprise. In other words that the capital can't be moved till a thaw comes. Perhaps the Legislature will find in this fact a reason for moving just as soon as a thaw does come.

None of our Indian tribes have been more intractiable than the Apaches of Northern Arizons, who are now being slaughtared by the United States soldiers. Two detachments of troops are hunting them down in every direction. One hundred of the savages have been killed, a large number wounded, and their camps and stores destroyed wherever found.

THE standing argument of the Charles sonians on the Capital removal question is, that it is just as far from Charleston to Wheeling as it is from Wheeling to Charleston, and that there is just as much ice in the river one way as the other. They ignore the important fact that while less than a third of the State would have to overcome these difficulties in getting to Wheeling, more than two-thirds of the State encounters them in going to Charleston. "The greatest good to the greatest number" ought to control the location of

WE feel sure the allusions of our correspondent "Alpha" to the presence of Mr. PANNEL at Charleston do that gentleman injustice. We do not know what Mr. PANNEL has thought, or what he has done, about his claim to the seat in the Senate from this district; but we are confident he has not meant to do anything inimical to the Interests of Wheeling in the matter of the capital removal. At this distance it looks as if his presence at Charleston had hastened the admission of Mr. CUNNINGHAM, whether with any design on his part or not, of course we canthe Charleston Courier of the 13th inst. has reached us. Looking over the pro ceedings of the previous day in the Leglalature we find nothing of first-class importance but this in the House:

Mr. Campbell offered the following, which was objected to by Mr. Morrison, which was objected to by Mr. Morrison, and lies over:

will afford so fine a field for rural elowill afford so fine a field for rural eloquence, that it will take at least a couple of days in each House to do the subject justice, if the business is prosecuted with the energy that has characterised proceedings thus far.

In their delivery, the large audience eagerly listened to them without manifesing any evidences of weariness or listlessness, as is often the case when the discourses fail to interest them. Rev. Morton, although a young man in the ministry, is possessed of more than ordinary talent, is a pleasant

The Register had news, yesterday, that had life the removal of the Carical had been commands the attention of his hearers. the bill for the removal of the Capital had been referred in the Senate to the Judiciary Committee. The Register is right, we think, in regarding this as unfavorable for the bill. There was no reason for referring the bill to any committee except for purposes of delay. This being true, if the reference was made on a test vote, the measure is already dead. If any friends of the bill voted for reference they simply gave its opponents an advantage that they will not fail to use. This bill provides for the removal on the 20th inst., and we suppose it would be of no value if it does not become a law before that time. If the bill should be passed by the Senate, Gov. Jacob may hold it five days, which if the bill were passed to-day would carry it forward to the 26th. If the bill be amended so as to fix another date for removal, it will have to go back to the House. been referred in the Senate to the Judicia-

A RESOLUTION was introduced in the Legislature recently looking to such an amendment of the Constitution as will of George Durch, Req., on Market Square, permit the collection of debts by execution without the verdict of a jury in each tion without the verdict of a jury in each case. Our readers may not be generally started it, but under the new Constitution payment of debt cannot be enforced withpayment of debt cannot be enforced without such a verdict. The fact was pointed out by a legal correspondent of ours last Spring directly after the Constitution was first proposed, but as it could not be denied it was ignored by the advocates of adoption. The provision of the Constitution referred to is this:

"No person shall be depriced of life, liberty or property, without due process of law and the judgment of his peers."

When an officer takes a man's property for debt, without the debt having been adjudged by a jury, he does it in the teeth of Centaur Liniment this 10th section of the bill of rights. It is therefore, of necessity, an act of violence, if not robbery; and we are not clear but the efficer is liable not only for the recovery of the property but to a criminal

And under this provision no man can be imprisoned till a jury has decided him guilty of an offence so punishable; and every time a man is sent to the "Lock-up" by Judge Good, or to the jail by Justice Jounston, the inslienable right secured to him by this 10th section is violated, and those officials, and all others executing similar acts, could be successfully ing similar acts, could be successfully Children Cry_for Pitcher's Cas ment to put an end to this anomalous toria. A Wicked Youngster.

St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Cedar Falls, Iowa, has been without a minister for some time. Last Friday week it was announced by the young man, D. W. Burngame, in charge of the church as sexton, that on Sunday service would be resumed. The Cedar Falls Gasette tells what appened on Sunday, and how the people feel about it, as follows:

Accordingly the congregation assembled for worship, and at the time for worship who should appear from the vestry but this boy Burlingame, in his white role, who immediately began to officiate. Rarely have divines so electrified an auditorious statements of the contract Rarely have divines so electrified an audience as on this occasion. To a part of those present, who were strangers, he was supposed to be a young collegiate who had a been authorized to read service, but to those who knew the young striplior, if the angel Gabriel with his trumpet had suddenly appeared they could not have been more surprised and dumbfounded. A part immediately left the church, and it is said that one of the vestrymen, as he passed out, was so chargined that a

it is said that one of the vestrymen, as he passed out, was so chargrined that a "righteous indignation" induced him to swear, if not right out in meeting, just outside the door, at the boy's presumptive desceration.

A choir of young misses, who had been raining a week or more, furnished the music for the occasion. The young divine a went through the usual exercises of prayer with as little embarrasment as a D. D. of a twenty years' experience, and turning to the Bible, gave out for his text the pass. Nage, "Let your light so shine," etc. Dwelling but a moment or two upon the text, he launched forth into an exhortation on the necessity of employing a pastion on the necessity of employing a pas-tor, and the shame that it was to the church that it should remain unoccupied. After continuing in this strain for a short time, he closed the services with the usual

It has been the theme of much comment as to way a boy could have the audacity to thus descrate the pulpit; but the answer was given by him to his comrades the next morning that "It was too do dad that such a nice little church should be without a pastor." We cannot, without our pencil, do justice to the occasion, and therefore, with these facts; as they occurred, ask our readers to draw upon their imagination for a scene that has never been heard of for descrative inpudence or indicates.

has never been heard of for desecrative impudence or ludicrous "check" in the Dark or Middle Ages, or ever before in this wonderful and progressive present. The officers and members are justly indignant at this disgrace to the church, and hope never again to bear the humiliation which the boy's action has brought upon them.

THROUGH some rift in the ice blockade that the juvenile D. D. had been ascertained the Charleston Courier of the 13th inst.
